MESSAGE OF WELCOME

It gives me great pleasure to invite you to the annual celebration of the Royal Charter of 1784 and in doing so extend a warm welcome to RCSI's Fellows, Members, alumni, faculty, staff, students and healthcare colleagues.

Last year, COVID-19 forced cancellation of a face to face celebration but instead a successful virtual meeting was held that reached over 4000 registrants in 54 countries. This year the Charter Meeting was planned to incorporate the Millin meeting and the Charter Day Meeting traditionally held close to the 11th February, the date of the first Charter.

As you can imagine, the recent surge in COVID cases forced changes such that the Charter Meeting has been postponed to April 21-22 in the expectation that an in person would be possible. Fortunately the recent surge in the omicron variant of COVID appears to have passed and with the easing of restrictions, I am delighted that the Millin meeting will go ahead on Friday 4th February as a hybrid meeting.

RCSI is greatly honoured that Ms Amina J Mohammed, Deputy Secretary General of the United Nations and Chair of the UN Sustainable Development Group will deliver the 29th Carmichael Lecture in person on Friday 4th February. There can be few more important topics than Education and Sustainable Development as we emerge from a pandemic that has brought the fragility of modern society into focus and highlighted the extreme inequalities in our world. As former President Mary Robinson said during her Emily Winifred Dickson Lecture (2019) the clock is at one minute to midnight, and society has very little time to stop it ticking.

The programme begins a virtual session from the Faculty of Surgical Trainers' Programme. The topics covered include the successes and challenges of the new intercollegiate curriculum in surgery and how training committees and training programme directors can best be supported. The session will be available on line as well as being available to view on site in the Desmond Theatre in RCSI.

In the afternoon, Symposium 1 will explore the current status of colleagues in 'non-training scheme' surgical positions within the health service. The discussion will focus on recommendations from RCSI Council's short life working group on non-training scheme doctors.

The session will also be addressed by Professor Mike Griffin, President RCS Edinburgh. I look forward to a vibrant discussion. Symposium 2 will give perspectives for a career in Global Surgery and will include a presentation by Mr Mike McKirdy, President RCPS Glasgow. Both symposia will be presented in hybrid format allowing in person and on line participation.

The 44th Millin Lecture will be delivered by Professor Joseph Butler on the Evolution of Spine Surgery. This promises to be an outstanding denouement of recent advances in precision surgery incorporating image guided techniques.

I have no doubt that the programme will live long in your memory, not just as the first live meeting in RCSI for 2 years but for the quality of the programme and the collegiality of once again meeting friends and colleagues in familiar surroundings.

Welcome back to RCSI.

Ms Amina J. Mohammed is the Deputy Secretary-General of the United Nations and Chair of the United Nations Sustainable Development Group.

Prior to her appointment, Ms Mohammed served as Minister of Environment of the Federal Republic of Nigeria where she steered the country's efforts on climate action and efforts to protect the natural environment.

Ms Mohammed first joined the United Nations in 2012 as Special Adviser to former Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon with the responsibility for post-2015 development planning. She led the process that resulted in global agreement around the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development and the creation of the Sustainable Development Goals.

Ms Mohammed began her career working on the design of schools and clinics in Nigeria. She served as an advocate focused on increasing access to education and other social services, before moving into the public sector, where she rose to the position of adviser to four successive Presidents on poverty, public sector reform, and sustainable development.

Ms Mohammed has been conferred several honorary doctorates and has served as an adjunct professor, lecturing on international development. The recipient of various global awards, Ms Mohammed has served on numerous international advisory boards and panels. She is the mother of six children and has two grandchildren.

2022 BOSCO O'MAHONY LECTURER

Professor Deborah McNamara is a Consultant General & Colorectal Surgeon at Beaumont Hospital, Dublin; Clinical Professor in Surgery at the Royal College of Surgeons in Ireland; Co-Lead of the National Clinical Programme for Surgery and a member of Council at RCSI. She chairs the Rectal Cancer Leads Group of the National Cancer Control Programme and the RCSI Committee for Surgical Affairs. She is a strong advocate for surgeons and for surgical patients. In her role as Co-Lead at NCPS, she works with colleagues in all surgical specialties to develop and publish implementable evidence-based policies and care pathways that will improve the delivery of surgical care in Ireland.

JOHN BOSCO O'MAHONY (1948 – 2008)

Mr John Bosco O'Mahony FRCSI MRCP (UK) was one of the longest serving members of the Council of RCSI, being elected by his peers for almost twenty years consecutively. His untimely death on the 29th July 2008 left a void for the College, where he served on Council since 1989, and for the people of Wexford, where he was Consultant Surgeon since July 1984 in Wexford General Hospital. Bosco was a man of exceptionally high intelligence as proved by his many personal and academic achievements. He was Head-boy and Gold medalist at Rockwell College and won a scholarship to study medicine in University College Dublin, graduating in 1972. He completed his internship at St Vincent's University Hospital and was awarded his MRCP (UK) before concentrating on his career in surgery. His post graduate training took him to St Thomas's Hospital in London and subsequently to Brigham and Women's Hospital and Harvard University in Boston USA, where he completed his research training. His greatest legacy will be his human touch. He understood people and their needs and worked extremely hard over the years in his profession. He was a great teacher and mentor of his junior colleagues and developed many long standing relationships with his trainees. He was awarded the Silver Scalpel in 2007 by the Higher Surgical Trainees in recognition of his talents.

RICHARD CARMICHAEL

Born 6 February 1779 in Dublin, fourth son of Hugh Carmichael, solicitor, and Sarah Carmichael. Educated privately by the Rev. John Fea, he went on to apprentice to Robert Moore Peile in 1794, completed his education at the House of Industry Hospitals, Dublin, and graduated with a licentiate from the Royal College of Surgeons in Ireland, subsequently becoming member, censor, member of the court of examiners and president (1813, 1826, 1845). Assistant surgeon to the Wexford militia (1795–1802), he was appointed surgeon to St George's Hospital and Dispensary, Dublin and to the Lock Hospital, Dublin, where his knowledge of venereal disease earned him an international reputation. From 1816 to 1836 he served as surgeon to the Richmond (later St Lawrence's) Hospital, Dublin; when John MacDonnell and Robert Adams applied for the vacant post of surgeon, Carmichael resigned, thereby ensuring the appointment of both men. In 1846 he resigned as a consulting surgeon in the interests of younger colleagues, confining himself to home consultations and teaching. He assisted MacDonnell at the Richmond in the first operation in Ireland to be performed under general anaesthesia (1 January 1847). He was well known for his research on cancer, scrofula, and particularly syphilis, for which he advocated the limited use of mercury, publishing an essay on the venereal diseases which have been confounded with syphilis.

A leading figure in medical education and reform, and a distinguished teacher, he was principal founder of the Richmond Hospital School of Anatomy, Medicine, and Surgery, where he lectured in surgery, anatomy, and physiology and was principal for two years. He donated money during his lifetime and bequeathed £10,000 to the school, which was renamed the Carmichael School of Anatomy, Medicine, and Surgery, and bequeathed £3,000 in trust to the RCSI for essay prizes on medical education and reform. Joint founder and president from 1839 of the Irish Medical Association (forerunner of the Irish Medical Organisation), which lapsed in 1846, he campaigned for the union of the medical and surgical professions, with apothecaries as a separate profession. He advocated a uniform professional education and examinations in medicine, surgery, and pharmacy for all medical students, publishing 'Plan of medical reform'; his principles became mandatory in the 1858 medical act and its amendments (1886). A founder of the (Royal) Medical Benevolent Fund Society of Ireland, he was the first Irishman to be elected a corresponding member of the French Royal Academy of Medicine; he was elected one of six presidents on the founding of the Dublin Pathological Society; a member and council member of the RIA, and member of the Royal Dublin Society.

In 1825 he left the Church of Ireland and joined the Strand St. congregation of Unitarian Christians. He was a cousin of Dr Hugh Richard Carmichael (c.1790– 1872), joint master of the Coombe Hospital, Dublin. Carmichael was accidentally drowned (8 June 1849) in Dublin Bay, and is buried in St George's parish cemetery, Dublin.

TERENCE JOHN MILLIN

1903 - 1980

Born in Helen's Bay, Co. Down, only son of Samuel Shannon Millin (barrister) and Ella Catherine Millin. He was initially schooled in Tipperary but finished his secondary schooling in St. Andrew's College in Dublin. There he demonstrated not only his intelligence, but also his sporting prowess, playing on the side that won the prestigious Leinster Schools Senior Cup in rugby union in 1921 and in later years was selected to play for Ireland in an international match against Wales. He achieved numerous academic glories and was awarded a scholarship to Trinity College. Here his remarkable career continued and after a period in Arts and Mathematics, he enrolled as a medical student, and found his true calling. After a stellar undergraduate career, he undertook a house surgeon post at Sir Patrick Dun's Hospital in Dublin, and from there travelled to London to continue his surgical career. After various posts undertaken to increase his experience and knowledge, he undertook the examination for the Fellowship of the Royal College of Surgeons of England, and passed it on the first attempt. He then took up a position in London's All Saint's Hospital becoming assistant to Canny Ryall, a Trinity graduate who had set up this 11-bed, purely urological hospital. Here Millin developed his interests in matters of the genitourinary tract.

In 1945, Millin published his landmark paper 'Retro-pubic prostatectomy: a new extra visceral technique', in the Lancet. The new operation for removal of the enlarge obstructing prostate gland was a huge advance on existing methods and reduced death from open prostatectomy from perhaps 15 per cent to 3 per cent. Millin became world famous almost overnight. His contribution to male health was recognized in 1955 with the receipt of the prestigious Francis Armory Prize, awarded by the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. Further honours included the Saint Peter's Medal, the British Association of Urological Surgeon's highest award in 1951, and becoming that society's first Irish President in 1954. He was also made an honorary fellow of the Australasian College of Surgeons in 1968, and was appointed as honorary member of the American College of Surgeons.

Upon his retirement, he returned to Ireland and was elected President of the Royal College of Surgeons in Ireland for an unprecedented two terms 1963-1966. He was instrumental in rejuvenating the undergraduate part of the college. Sadly, Millin developed a rare tumour of the vocal cords and passed away in 1980. However, he lives on in RCSI through Millin House, a student residence for which he had obtained the funds, and the annual Millin lecture to which you are attending today.
